Sam Banks is a shareholder with Bean, Kinney & Korman practicing in the areas of employment law, government contracts and commercial litigation.

Prior to becoming an attorney, Sam worked as an accountant and a financial analyst for seven years. While he worked in finance and accounting, it became apparent to him that he loved helping people, which prompted his return to school to become a lawyer.

Sam's passion for helping his clients along with his prior experience in finance and as an accountant gives him the unique ability to understand a company's business and legal needs, allowing him to provide tailored advice to any business client.
